

We cannot resist the opportunity which is here afforded of introducing to the notice of our readers, the following sentiments of that learned writer

/p168/

Dr. Smith, who in his “English Botany” says, “ A knowledge of the plants of our own country is, in many respects, even preferable to that of exotics, as it can be more readily and completely obtained, and is on several accounts more directly useful.

There is no occasion to mention the indispensable necessity of such knowledge, to those who are occupied with the rural economy of the country, to be well acquainted with its native vegetables; or to such as cultivate the healing art. “

Nor are the humble productions of our fields and woods deficient in real beauty, elegance, and singularity of structure; in which respect some of them even vie with the more favorite flowers from abroad.

The study of indigenous plants, as an amusement, has this eminent advantage over exotic botany, that these are always found in their natural state of growth, and that they double the pleasure of every walk and journey, and call forth to healthy exercise the bodily as well mental powers; whilst the person who has not a relish for such pursuits, must submit to take a walk in the country, without an object, and usually without enjoyment, merely for the purpose of exercise, and that alone; or toil in some dangerous sports, or sacrifice health to some sedentary employment.

Plants appear to have been profusely scattered over the earth, as the stars in the firmament, to invite man, by the attractions of curiosity and pleasure, to their contemplation. But the stars of heaven are placed at a great distance from us. To understand Astronomy requires a previous acquaintance with the mathematics, instruments, and a long artificial ladder, to bring them within our scope. Plants, on the contrary, grow under our very feet, and seem to invite our hands; and if the minuteness of their essential parts sometimes evade our sight, the instruments for their examination are comparatively trifling — a needle and a magnifying glass, or at most, a pocket microscope, is all the apparatus required.”

To the foregoing observations of the learned Doctor, we may add, in the language of the poet —

“ There’s not a tree,
A plant, a leaf, a blossom, but contains
A folio volume. We may read, and read,
And read again, and still find something new;
Something to please, and something to instruct,
E’en in the noisome weed.”
